STRIKE!

Nine Hundred Men Out of Work.

The Eighteen St. Louis Planing Mills to be Closed Because of this Fact.

The Leaders of Other Great Industrial Societies Make War on Knights of Labor.

A BIG STRIKE.

Nine Hundred Men out of Work at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, May 20.---Machine men in eighteen planing mills struck to-day for an advance and the adoption of the eight hour system. About 500 men are affected directly and 300 or 400 more indirectly. The proprietors say they will shut down indefinitely.

The strike in the southwestern lumber district of Chicago has apparently collapsed. All the yards were working yesterday with all the men whom they can provide work for. All the planing mills have also resumed, and the metal working establishments report increased forces of men at work. The only factories now idle are the furniture shops, and several of these have succeeded in resuming on the ten hour plan.

A dispatch from Cleveland cites a prominent Knight of Labor as saying that the Hon. James G. Blaine, of Maine, is a member of the local assembly of Knights of Labor at Augusta.

A strike is threatened in the Belleville (Ill.) mining district. The men complain that they average but $4 or $5 per week; that they often go to work hungry; that their families lack food, and that their children are kept from church and school owing to the rags by which their bodies are partially covered.

Molders' Strike at Terre Haute.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 20.—All the molders at the Terre Haute car works, about forty in number, went out on a strike against the reinstatement of Arthur Springer to his place in the shop. Springer was once foreman of the molding room, and the men imagined when he came back that he would be put over them again as foreman. He only went to work this morning. The men say Springer was unpopular when foreman before. The other departments of the works are running as usual.

THE K.'S OF LABOR

Meet With Great Opposition from Their Own People.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.— Officers of twenty national trades unions met here with closed doors to take united action, it was stated, to resist the encroachments being made upon open unions by the Knights of Labor. William Weihe, of Pittsburg, president of the Amalgamated society of iron and steel workers, presided. P. J. Maguire, of Cleveland, who represented the National Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, acted as secretary, and Vice-President John S. Kirchner, of the Cigar Makers' International Union, as sergeant-at-arms. Twenty delegates, representing the national orders of the following trades were present: Coal miners, printers, iron moulders, cigar makers, carpenters, brick layers, iron and steel workers, furniture makers, granite cutters, laster, boiler makers, bakers, tailors, metal workers, nailors, heaters and rollers, boot and shoe stitchers, and the national federation of trades. Letters pledging themselves to stand by the action of the conference were received from the druggists, glass blowers, wool hat finishers, telegraphers, Ohio Valley Trades assembly, silk and fur hat finishers, flint glass workers, piano makers, engineers and machinists, and mule spinners. The thirty-two associations represented by delegates or letters were claimed to have a total membership of 367,736. The representatives of each organization presented its grievance.

Resolutions were adopted that unions should strictly preserve their distinct and individual autonomy; that is not deemed advisable for any trades unions to be controlled by, or to join the Knights of Labor in a body, and that is the purpose of a certain element of the Knights of Labor to destroy the trades unions. A treaty was drafted for the consideration of the Knights of Labor, which will be submitted to the general executive board by a special committee.

WASHINGTON.

The Business of the National Legislators.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Staten Island bridge bill was laid before the senate. Mr. McPherson resumed his speech against the bill as reported and in support of his amendment providing for tunnel instead of a bridge.

The senate amendment of $800,000 to foreign mail service clause in the post-office appropriation bill was rejected by a vote of 142 to 86, followed by democratic cheers. The house concurred in this vote of the committee of the whole.

Senator Voorhees says there is no doubt whatever about the confirmation of Collector Hanlon, and there is no truth in the rumor that the finance committee will report adversely on the nomination.

HOUSE.

In the house, Holman, from the committee on appropriations, reported the executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bill. Referred to the committee of the whole.

The house went into committee of the whole on the senate amendments to the postoffice appropriation bill. The amendment setting apart $40,000 of the appropriation for a free delivery service where it is not now established was concurred in. An amendment was rejected which authorized the postmaster general to contract for inland and foreign mail service when it can be combined in one route, and also the amendment increasing by $80,000 the appropriation for the postal car service. The amendment was concurred in increasing from $251,725 to $291,000 for regular and special facilities in trunk lines.

POWDERLY PREFERRED.

He Can Remain Master Workman of the K of L.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—Frederick Turner, general secretary-treasurer of the Knights of Labor, was asked yesterday what he thought of Martin Irons' candidacy for election as general master workman, as announced in a dispatch from St. Louis, printed in to-day's Press. "I can only say," said he, "what I have said all along; that as long as Powderly wants to be grand master workman of the Knights he can be it. There is no man in the order who can take the position from him if he wants to retain it. It was perfectly right for Mr. Powderly to countermand Irons' order in regard to the St. Louis strike." A number of the most prominent Knights of Labor, among whom were John J. Cummings, secretary of district assembly No. 1, and George Frank, master workman of the cigarmakers' assembly, expressed similar sentiments in favor of Mr. Powderly's continuance in office, and in condemnation of Irons.

CHICAGO, May 20.—The leading brewers of Chicago and Milwaukee, who are combined in the Northern Brewers' association, to-day began a reduction in the price of beer, which is said to be the first step of a pre-arranged plan to squeeze out the small firms. During the past year a dozen small brewing concerns have started in this city, and, refusing to join the association, have set their own price on their product. Members of the association will hereafter charge but $6 per barrel instead of $7.20. The cost of manufacture is said to be $3.50, and it is expected the price will soon go below $6.

A young man from this place arrived there yesterday and to-day shipped the remains to this city. He claimed then to be her brother. The young lady is a striking brunette, handsomely dressed, with diamond ear-rings and valuable finger rings. Her identity has not yet been learned."

A Big Damage Suit for Mob Violence at Wabash.

WABASH, Ind., May 20.—Reuben Swank, the alleged wife-beater, of North Manchester, in this county, yesterday filed an action in the Wabash circuit court against the following well-known business and professional men of that place, who, it is alleged, were members of the mob which, in April, pulled him out of bed and gave him a fearful whipping. Tobias Pugh, Guilford Place, Doud Hamilton, Len J. Noftzger, B. F. Clemans, Daniel Salau, James Sexton, Wm. Pearson and Robert Shaeffer. The demand is for $10,000, and Swank declares that he will push the matter to the bitter end. Swank was terribly beaten and compelled to leave town under penalty of death. A rope was put around his neck, and with this he was led over the river and told to move out in a hurry. The beginning of the suit creates a sensation in North Manchester.

A FAIR TRIAL IN TERRE HAUTE.

The nineteenth century is said to be the age of skepticism, and so perhaps it is as regards religion, but its practical spirit inclines it to look favorably on everything that promises immediate benefit and it is always ready to give everything that seems useful a fair trial. The West especially has ever been open and cordial to all new ideas, and this may partly explain why Athlophoros, the sovereign remedy for rheumatism and neuralgia, has secured such a strong footing in Terre Haute. A well-known citizen who has the most implicit faith in it is Mr. R. Forster, the furniture dealer at No. 320 Main street. Mr. Forster, when recently asked at his warerooms as to the benefit he had derived from Athlophoros, answered as follows:

"Yes, I have used Athlophoros with the very best satisfaction. I have had neuralgia for many years, and could not find any medicine that would give me relief until I commenced using Athlophoros, and I can tell you I had used about everything."

"How did you first get confidence enough in Athlophoros to try it?"

"Well, it was just in this way. I was suffering very much at the time from my neuralgia. One Saturday evening Mr. Mallette, a manufacturer of wire mattresses, who is in business in Chicago, and lives at Elgin, Ill., came down to spend Sunday with me. Finding me suffering as I was he said

"'Get some Athlophoros. It is good, my wife used it and was cured of her neuralgia by it.'

"Without waiting for me to say much about it he went out and bought a bottle of the medicine. I took some that night and the next day I was as free from pain as if I had never had neuralgia. I spent several hours in a walk that Sunday with Mr. Mallette, which the day before would have been misery for me. During the summer months I am never troubled with neuralgia, but if I should be again I would certainly use Athlophoros, for I am fully convinced of its merits.

"I have recommended Athlophoros to several persons and have yet to learn of an instance where it did not accomplish its mission. Among others I recommended it to Mrs. Richards, who lives in Casey, Ill. I saw her in the city a few days ago and asked her if she had used it. She said that she had taken two bottles. It was helping her, and she said that she was going to get some more."

Mrs. C. A. Armstrong, of No. 123 South Second street, is another resident of Terre Haute, Ind., whom Athlophoros has cured.

"I used it for neuralgia," she says, "and it cured me. I had been troubled for about three years with what seemed at times neuralgia, and then again rheumatism. I was never free from pain. The very first dose of Athlophoros I took gave me relief, and after using only two bottles my soreness is all gone and I am feeling much stronger. My daughter was also cured of neuralgia by it."

"Yes, I can say Athlophoros did everything for me," is the daughter's statement. "I was so sick with neuralgia that I could not sit up and suffered the greatest pain. Mother sent me a half bottle of Athlophoros, the first few doses of which gave me relief. All I used was the half bottle and I have not had any neuralgia since."

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed who care more to make a large profit on a worthless article than to wait for the prosperity that ultimately results from honest dealing. These are the men who when asked for a Benson's Capcine Plaster, will recommend some cheap and trashy substitute or imitation, saying it is 'just as good.' Sometimes they will do up and sell the miserable imitation without remark, allowing the customer to suppose he has Benon's. If the valueless plaster is returned, Cheap John will say he made a mistake;—if not, he has done a good stroke of business. The public are cautioned against John and all his ilk. A Tot Who Wanted to Pluck the Stars.

Mr. and Mrs. Graves, of Echo, Tenn., were sitting chatting pleasantly in the sitting-room one evening, when their little 4-year-old daughter came in and exclaimed: "Mamma, mamma, come and see." Mrs. Graves got up and went with her little daughter out in the yard. "What is it, my daughter?" "Mamma, what is that up yonder so bright?" she asked. "Where, my little child?" "Up yonder in the sky. Are they little gold dollars, mamma?" asked little Fannie. "Yes, my darling," said the good woman, laughingly, and went in the house, leaving her to watch the little gold dollars. Little Fannie climbed up on the fence and tried to get one, and her father, seeing her, went to her. "What are you doing up there, little pet?" he asked, as he took her down. "I am trying to get me some little gold dollars to make me some earrings." "Couldn't you get them, baby?" "No, papa," she said, sweetly; "please get them for me." Little Fannie was taken into the house and put to bed, but she will never forget the "little gold dollars."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Wonderful Mexican Garden.

Cuernavaca is celebrated as the home of the conqueror Cortez, says a correspondent of the Providence Journal, and the site of his curious palace of hewn stone. But it is just as celebrated for the great Borda Gardens.

The Borda is not what it once was, when the hand of neglect was lifted from its wonderful forest of flowers. This beautiful garden has been sad ever since the death of its imperial lover, the arch-duke of Austria, Maximilian, emperor of Mexico. The vegetation is unkept, and the dishevelled foliage falls over the trees, till they seem almost human in their sorrow and resemble that poor demented woman in the European castle who still fondly fancies that the golden rim of Mexico's crown rests on the head of her husband Maximilian. In this mournful garden the branches of the trees seem twisted in paroxysms of pain and flung in desperate and threatening attitude towards the sky. The great pond is covered with a mantle of green, that crape of waters. The shaded aisles are deserted. The only gardeners who water the flowers are the clouds of heaven; the only workman who trims the trees is sombre autumn. But on entering this spot the sentiment of admiration is at once aroused. The visitor instinctively enters on tiptoe as if he were treading some enchanted ground, as if he feared to wake the birds asleep upon the branches, the dryads hidden in the old ash trees or the nymphs under the never ruffled water of the ponds. Face to face with nature in this lonely trysting place the heart of the tourist is drawn out towards nature, while love for the beautiful is led by the hand of fear through the scented walks of La Borda.

The silence of solitude rests over the thousands of acres. The voice of man is unheard. But the trees, the bending flowers, the rippling streams and the soughing breezes seem to speak. Outside the garden the tropic sunlight of the Tierra Caliente falls like molten lead; inside the air is refreshing, and the aisles arched with giant palms are as cool as the aisles of a great cathedral. The first feeling experienced is such as is felt when one enters a great palace. But here no liveried lackey or armed slave tries to eject us. The dryads do not issue from ash or cedar to dismiss us. This great garden cannot be compared with the uniform and carefully cultivated gardens round the City of Mexico. It is an immense forest of flowers and fruits. Even the dead pond is of unusual proportions. Maximilian of Austria, prince and artist as he was, spent there the happiest hours of his stormy reign in Mexico, but the angel with the flaming sword drove him and his brilliant Carlotta out of that paradise, never to enter again. Never again will that romantic adventurer tread those suspended gardens, like the hanging gardens of Semiramis, poised above the Tierra Caliente that lies below those cliffs. The gardens cover some of the most beautiful mountain slopes in all the state of Merelos, where they were first laid out by Count Borda, a Spanish miner, who became a millionaire by precious metals he extracted from the celebrated Tasco mines in the state of Guerrero. They are desolate and deserted now. But some new Mexican or American millionaire may some day people with marble statues those deep forests, and may throw heaven's sunlight down through those roofs of fragrance. Then will disappear that spell of enchantment. Cortez and his mistress, Malluche, will then no longer haunt La Borda, nor the "foot steps of return" be heard of Maximilian and Carlotta. Mexico's children of tomorrow may play in those now silent shades and under those talismanic trees.

LOVE FOR THE OLD FLAG.

Its Thrilling Effect After the War Upon a Noted Rebel General.

The war of the rebellion is now twenty years away, and with the lapse of time nearly all the asperities culminating in that long and bloody struggle have softened and disappeared. One of the most prominent leaders of the South, who had filled the highest offices of the country before the war, and who has long since passed away, is the subject of this little reminiscence.

Some years subsequent to the close of the war, the writer was in business in a Southern city, where his duties brought him in close contact with many men who had been prominent in cabinet and field under the flag of the Confederacy. It happened one evening that the writer and a half dozen or more of these men were engaged in conversation, and, after a while, from general matters the talk drifted round to the condition of the country. Growing excited as the conversation progressed, one denounced the government at Washington as a perfect despotism, asserting with vehemence that he would sooner, if he could, live under the King of Dahomey. One after another gave expression to his feelings, none going to the same extent, but all in the same vein, and I, a Northern man, was about to make a fitting reply to the tirade of abuse when General —— turned to him of whom I am writing, and resting his hand on his shoulder, said: "What do you say about it, John?"

The person addressed had sat for many moments with bowed head, taking no part in the conversation. Lifting his head and gazing round a moment he replied, in a tone I shall never forget and a feeling I cannot hope to portray: "I have this to say: Let the Republican party do the worst it can; let the Republicans do fifty times worse than they are doing, and then we shall the best government any people in the world ever had. We went through the war together, and we suffered all its ills in common, but when it ended our ways parted. You remained and took up the burdens and duties of peaceful life in your old homes, and, ruined and devastated as they were, you still found comfort in them. I took a different course and endured what you were not called upon to face. When all was over, you all know how I reached Cuba, and then went to London, where I found friends. I took a notion to travel, and for four years I wandered over Europe. Then one morning I was at Alexandria, and rising early, I strolled down toward the quays, and looking out over the bay, there, gentlemen (the tears running down his cheeks as he spoke), I saw floating in the sunshine the handsomest flag that ever floated, the old stars and stripes, and I thought, in an ecstacy I never before felt, there is my flag. I had followed it up the heights of Chapultepec; it had waved over my home; my children had played among its folds; it had been raised in my honor, and in the momentary rush of feelings it was again my flag, and the dearest and most beautiful thing upon the earth. But all was gone as soon as it came, and for the first time I realized in all its terrible force the fact that I had no flag, no country, but was an outcast and a wanderer over the earth. I could endure it no longer. I came back over the sea. I had no part in all this broad domain, no right to set my foot on any part of the soil of the United States, but I said the rest of my life shall be lived in sight of it even if I may never more have right in it. So I came to Clifton, just over the border, where I could see it over the river which I might not cross, and there the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night I watched it and longed for it with a hunger few men may comprehend. At last, but oh, how long in coming to me, came the amnesty act, and I got over the river and took it, begrudging even the minutes that intervened when I could say again, "it is my flag and my country."

He ended, and for minutes not a person present ventured a word, but moistened eyes and labored breath silently attested that more than one present could in heart, at least, find warrant for the longings of John C. Breckenridge, for he it was of whom I have written, whose longings I have attempted to portray, but whose language is beyond my ability to reproduce. —Boston Globe.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Two physicians in New York gave certificates to the supreme court that Bartley Campbell is suffering from general paralysis. The famous playright will probably be taken from the Bellevue hospital to the Bloomingdale asylum.

In the Dear Old Days.

We differ in creed and politics, but we are a unit all the same on the hesirableness of a fine head of hair. If you mourn the loss of this blessing and ornament, a bottle or two of Parker's Hair Balsam will make you lood as you did in the dear old days. It is worth trying. It is the only standard 50c article for the hair.

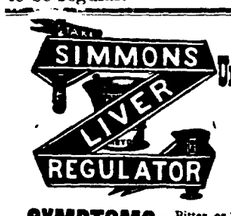

I think Ely's Cream Balm is the best remedy for catarrh I ever saw. I never took anything that relieved me so quickly and I have not felt so well for a long time. I used to be troubled with severe headaches two or three times a week, but since using the balm have only had one and that was very light compared with the former ones.—A. J. Alcorn, agent U. P. Ry Co., Eaton, Co.

I find Ely's Cream Balm good for catarrh of long standing.—M. N. Lasley, 1934 West Chestnut St., Louisville.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The Earth's Temperature.

Between Merseburg and Schladebach, Saxony, there has been bored the deepest auger hole in the world. The intention originally was to search for coal, but being unsuccessful the boring has been used to experiment on the temperature of the interior of the earth. A glass tube, open at the top and filled with quicksilver, was inclosed in a metal tube in such a manner as to prevent the entrance of water and still not to prevent its sensibility to the effects of temperature. When the glass tube was reached and let down a warmer temperature the quicksilver exploded and a portion run over. When the tube was brought up the quicksilver cooled down, and consequently occupied less space in the tube than before. The glass tube with the remaining quicksilver was then placed in water the temperature of which was high enough to make the quicksilver rise again to the brim of the tube, which showed that the temperature of the water was exactly the same as that of the interior of the earth. The depth of the boring is 4,500 feet, and the temperature at the bottom has been ascertained to be 120 degrees Fahrenheit. This temperature increasing in the same ratio, the boiling point of water would be reached at 10,000 feet; at a depth of 47 miles sufficient heat would be found to melt platina. The radius of the earth being 3,950 miles, the ratio of the solid crust of the earth to the radius would be as 1 to 85. According to this measurement, then, the point at which lead would melt would be reached at a depth of five or six miles, which would indicate that the crust of the earth is not so thick and firm as has been supposed. We must accept the theory, however, that in penetrating to the interior of the earth the increase of heat is by no means found to be regular.

DID WE LIVE BEFORE?

HOW THE THEORY OF PRE-EXISTENCE HAS TAKEN ROOT.

A Talk With a Believer—Every Man What He Has Made Himself—Genius an Inheritance From Other Lives. How to Read Past Incarnations.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, May 17.—Re-embodiment of souls is a subject much talked of in New York by those who are fond of exploring new fields of thought. Not only is it talked of, but believed in, by a large number of persons whose brains command respect in the practical pursuits of life. It is a little startling to hear an envied business man or an "able editor" declare his belief in a pre-existence, unless one is familiarized with the reincarnation doctrine. You can't think of him as anybody but himself; but he can, because he has accustomed his mind to it.

Indeed, among believers in this interesting theory, it is quite the fashionable recreation to give your friends the benefit of what you think you were in the life immediately preceding this one, and also to hazard a few guesses as to what they were. As you can readily see, this is a fresh and fascinating field for conversation. It has extraordinary possibilities and no limitations. But here is a queer thing in regard to it: You can tell a friend that you believe he was no end of a scoundrel in his past embodiments, and he never gets angry with you—in all probability he agrees with you, and admits that the penalties imposed upon him in this life are just. Yet if you hinted that he had been wicked and worthless in this life, however irresponsible he may have been for it, and that whatever trouble he is now staggering under is the direct result of his wrongdoing, he would most likely knock you down, if you should belong to the sex that gets knocked down. His previous existences, however, you can slander and detract with impunity. They are a long way in his rear, and neither reflect glory nor shame, for the reason that reputation's data for this existence begins with this existence.

Yet the re-embodiment theory distinctly states that we are what we have made ourselves. We suffer from ourselves. The objective man born into the physical world is the creation of the person he last animated. Our joys, sorrows and sins are of our own making. Our life is a fabric woven by ourselves. The eastern word for this is "karma." It is a sadly put upon word just now, reiterated so often that it is likely to grow a little wearisome. We have no western equivalent for this Hindu term, which is a volume compressed into a single word. "And what an idea it conveys of sowing and reaping, and justice!"

I was present where two or three were gathered together discussing reincarnation, recently. The editor of a humorous journal joined us. Somebody repeated the conversation to him up to the point we had carried it. "Oh, yes, I believe that I lived before," he said, seriously, "and that I shall live again, and again and again."

Then, in a lighter vein: "I must have lived to very poor purpose, too, when I created such a karma for myself as I am now experiencing. Think of it, doomed to edit the stuff they call humor. What could I have done to deserve it?"

One man, a writer whose name carries weight all over the American newspaper world, told me in confidence that he had reason to believe he had been re-embodied nineteen times on this planet alone, and that in one of his embodiments he had been a great French military man.

I know a woman whose friends believe her to have been an anchorite in some previous existence. Traces of grim asceticism are still noticeable in her. If she were told to choose between a bed of rose leaves and a board, she would chose the board. She denies herself bodily ease from a curious feeling that she ought to which her reason doesn't indorse. She makes every bit of toil as hard as possible, although she talks much about simplifying life and labor.

Another woman thinks she was a man in an existence immediately preceding this, because she doesn't care a cent for men; finds it impossible to love them, and is bored by the society of the handsomest and best of them in an hour or less time.

And still another admits having been a gossip and talebearer in another life. During her childhood she would risk breaking her neck any time to be the first to tell something on somebody. However interesting it is to surmise what our previous lives were, it is still more interesting to shape out our future lives. According to the Buddhistic theory we can be what we wish to be. We are creating our future lives now. In truth, that is a law which fulfills itself even in this world, as Stonewall Jackson, who believed in it, demonstrated. Emerson also believed that every man could possess what he wished to possess if he would only pay the price.

Not every one who believes in re-embodiment of spirit is a Buddhist. People of all religions and of no religion take to it, at least just now when it seems to be the vogue. It is gratifying to the ego; it makes every man his own ancestor, and ranks him in the matter of age and experience equal with the oldest and wisest. One of the chief allurements of this theory is that it makes no man older than the youngest infant, except in this round of life. It consoles the old, for it promises them youth over again. I talked with one of its strongest adherents the other day—a man whose opinion on all subjects pertaining to the mundane welfare of mankind is honored. I asked him what was the strongest point he could make in favor of the re-embodiment theory.

"The justice of it," he answered. "It is the only plan which promises absolute justice to every human being, and makes each responsible for himself. I believe that we are the creatures of centuries, of cycles, of millions and millions of ages. We have always a future before us greater than the past. Our blunders can be retrieved, our sins atoned for, our longings realized. We shall reap as we have sown, and, mark you, this belief makes us exceedingly particular in the sowing. If I were to play the tyrant and oppressor here I truly believe that in my next embodiment I should pay the penalty by being a miserable serf, and I should deserve it, too."

"How about your intermediate time—the period between your death here and your rebirth?"

"Oh, we devote that time to getting rested and refreshed for the next fight. Between each physical existence the individual unit passes through a period of existence in the corresponding spiritual world. The Buddhists call that, or the highest phase of it, Devachan, and say that the soul rests there from 1,500 to 2,000 years. For my part I believe that it dies out of its spiritual existence as we die out of this life, and in the process is really born into another worldly existence. The life of a man, like a world system, is a terminable period. And then, did you ever think of the unfairness of dividing our life into thirty or seventy years here, and an eternity on the other side of the grave? It isn't a fair shake. The only eternity that seems just and possible to me is an eternity of lives, which will give every soul action, development, as well as disburse the rewards and penalties. We are experiencing a part of that eternity now, and we always have been."

"But if your theory is correct children are not really related to their parents?"

"Only by the laws of attraction. Spirits will seek embodiment through agencies like themselves; but if these are not accessible I believe the impulse to live is so overpowering that they will seize any opportunity of entering life that presents itself, and that accounts for the incongruities we often see in families and surroundings."

"But if you lived before you ought to have some recollection of it."

"Not necessarily, although we are not sure but we do. Whence come the thoughts, fancies and vague, far-off memories that all are familiar with? Who knows how much of his mental coloring he owes to this life and how much to previous lives? Who has not, in agony, sometimes echoed the poet's soliloquy: "Methinks I lived in some old world, and this is hell." Who remembers the first five years of his life? All our infancy is a blank. Who remembers all he said, saw or heard on any one day of last week? Yet we were as much ourselves as infants as we are now in maturity. I have lived nearly forty-five years, yet all that I can remember perfectly would scarcely cover thirty complete days of my existence, yet I was as much myself in the large parts of my life which I cannot remember, as in the present moment."

"How came you to acquire this belief?"

"I did not acquire it. It was an inheritance. I brought that much of my previous lives with me in memory. I cannot recall a time when I did not believe in it. As a child I used to shut my eyes and try very hard to remember something that seemed near to me, but could not become clear. But I believe in pre-existence as a matter of philosophy. It explains why man is here, without libeling nature or God; it fixes the responsibility on man himself, without outraging justice, and it presents the strongest incentive for good actions."

"You think, then, that man is a free agent."

"From the standpoint of pre-existence every human being is self-made. One can see that men are free to do as they will after they are created, hence it would seem that the ordinary theory of free will is correct. Then he reflects that men have nothing to do with their own creation; that some are created good and some bad, some wise and some foolish, some beautiful and some ugly, and that their good or bad qualities are inheritances. Then he is forced to believe that man should be neither credited nor condemned for qualities which he is not responsible for, but which were inherited from ancestors or were the gift or curse of the Creator. This process of reasoning will not only destroy all basis for belief in free will, but tends to weaken the commendation of good qualities or the condemnation of bad ones, since an individual is responsible for neither, if they were given him in his creation. Let us take Emerson, if you please, as the type of our best man of late years—morally, intellectually, spiritually; and take Bender, the Kansas murderer, as the type of all that is brutal, ferocious and depraved. Now, if those two men inherited their characters and qualities—if one was created good and the other bad—I do not see why the one should be loved and praised and the other condemned. It would seem that Emerson was simply a very lucky man in the act of being born; that he drew an extraordinary prize in the lottery of creation, while Bender was unlucky in a remarkable degree, and is deserving of all sympathy. But I deny the tremendous libel on Deity or on Nature, that some men are created good and some bad, without their own knowledge or consent. The theory of preëxistence explains the whole case. Emerson was born into that state of mental, moral and spiritual elevation into which he had developed himself through previous lives. He was, in a sense, his own creator. Hence all the honor given him is justly due him. Our natural feelings on this, as on many other subjects, are right. Bender was what he had made himself, hence the loathing for his character is just."

"And genius, is it, too, self-made?"

"Self-developed, surely. Indeed, the struggles of genius in this world are to me a strong proof of preëxistence. The soul that has partially developed its genius in a previous life brings its longings and its powers here, and through obstacles and defeat finds expression. No one life could perfect a genius of any kind, and a universal genius, a man or woman who can do anything, is the result of a separate development of each talent, the perfecting of many industrious, aspiring lives."

"Do you find anything in the scriptures corroborating your belief?"

"Yes, I think Jesus understood it as he did many other hidden things, and alluded to his incarnation and preëxistence in these words: 'I came from the father, and am come into the world; I leave the world and go unto the father.' Again when he says, 'I can lay down my life and I can take it again.' And it seems that the people he lived among were believers in the re-embodiment of certain ones, at least. They were always looking for the return of the prophets in some new form. They said to Jesus, 'Who art thou? Art thou Elias? Art thou that great prophet?'"

"What are the clews by which we can guess what and who we were in the past?"

"We are our own clews—index, preface and all the chapters are within ourselves. I believe that when men clearly understand this, and think about it, each one's past existence will be an open book. Even now we have but little difficulty in knowing what a man is made of. There is a reason for everything, and when we learn to read the book of human nature aright, every virtue, vice, taste and prejudice will reveal its history, even as the history of a nation can be traced through its language."

"You are a radical and original evolutionist?"

"Yes, I believe in an evolution for the spirit of man which is a spiral progress through worlds. This earth is but one link in a mighty chain of worlds. I for one believe that the whole starry heavens is the heritage of the human family."

"Do you think rebirth a voluntary or compulsory matter?"

"Both. I believe that it is the law, just as death here is a great part of the law of nature. We must be born again and we want to be. The impulse to live pervades all matter, seen and unseen. Life in the flesh means development. It is the soul's battle ground. Here we win or lose. The form of man, which we have every reason to suppose is the same after he becomes disembodied as now, was certainly designed for a life of material activity. In the flesh again and again we must live and conquer, or live and fail to try it over and over until we do conquer."

And yet this man who goes about with such tremendous theories in his mind is a successful business man, and fills his place in the world as conscientiously as any worm of the dust who never dreamed that he was to inherit so vast a kingdom as the universe.

GERTRUDE GARRISON.

A Time to be Thankful.

It was once suggested to Mr. Talmage that he get up a lecture on "Cranks," and relate his experience with cranky people. He laughed, and said that while his experience was wide and varied on the subject of "Cranks," yet there was one story that always came to his mind when the conversation turned to these peculiar people. He was once very busy writing in his room at a hotel, when a man stepped up to him and said:

"You are Mr. Talmage?"

"I am, sir."

"Well, sir, I am an evolutionist, and I want to discuss that question with you. I am also an annihilationist. I believe that when I die that will be the end of me."

"Thank God for that!" devoutly ejaculated Mr. Talmage, as he walked off and left the man perfectly dazed.

Its range is so wide, and its good effects so sure, that nothing else, except good nursing, are needed in a great majority of cases. Buy it, try it, and afterwards it will not require any praise from us.

The general assembly of the Presbyterians of the United States met to-day at Minneapolis, Minn. Dr. W. T. Ferguson, of this city, is one of the delegates elect from this presbytery.

It is said that Professor Diedrich, of Concordia college, has consented to accept the republican nomination for congress in this district if it is tendered him. Hon. T. P. Keater is also an aspirant and is leading in the race.

Neither the Wabash people nor any other party which may in the future control the Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago road need expect good results from operating it until they abandon the idea of making it anything but a local road, and locate the general offices of it at Indianapolis. It cannot be operated successfully at arm's length. It must be run from Indianapolis, not St. Louis or Toledo.

IT WAS RICH.

The Racy Omans Divorce Case at Columbia City.

Judge Olds has rendered his decision in the Omans case. Mrs Oman first sued her husband for a divorce and $3,000 alimony; then Oman, himself, filed a cross-complaint and also asked for a divorce. The trial was quite lengthy and sensational and "rich." Judge Olds gave Fred Oman a divorce and also gave him the custody of his three sons. To Mrs. Oman he gave $800 alimony, to be paid as follows: $150 in thirty days; $250 in one year, and $400 in two years. Oman is to pay all costs of the trial in addition to the above. E. M. Curtis, who led Mrs. Oman astray, was arrested at midnight shortly after the decision and was about to be fined for carrying concealed weapons and tarred and feathered, but the mob weakened and let him go. Messrs. Irwin Stratton and Isaac Wiseman were attorneys in the case, and Curtis used to live here.

A RETIRED JURIST.

Hon. Wm. H. Coombs Steps Down from Active Life.

Yesterday Hon. Wm. H. Coombs retired from the law firm of Coombs, Bell & Morris, and will not practice during the remainder of his years. Mr. Coombs has practiced law in this city for forty-five years and was selected to succeed Judge Worden on the supreme court bench of Indiana. Mr. Coombs is regarded as one of the greatest legal lights in the west, and although not an orator, he was a recognized authority in all branches of law and could express himself with matchless force and logic on paper. Mr. Coombs has worked hard and can afford to pass the remainder of his years in quiet. Hon. R. C. Bell and Mr. S. L. Morris will continue the law business as successors to Coombs, Bell & Morris, and the gentlemen are recognized as among the leading lights of the Indiana bar.

FIGURES TALK.

Allen County in Splendid Shape as All Can Read and Understand.

County Treasurer Dalman proceeded to Indianapolis to-day with a check for $47,862.48, which he will pay to the state treasurer, receiving in return Allen county's portion of the school fund. Mr. Dalman has the books in shape and these footings show the moneys collected for the various funds put on the tax duplicate by-law:

County fund collected	.....	$104,592 38
Township fund	"	6,000 24
Local tuition	"	4,133 24
Special school	"	29 015 07
Road fund	"	18,572 80
Special road fund	"	5,398 35
Dog	"	2,155 83
Gravel road	"	2,016 12

These figures are official and show that $104,592.38 cash is in the county treasury for expenditure on county purposes. Put this cash fund against the $200,000 bonded indebtedness of the county and it reduces the debt to something like $95,500. This shows that this county is not burdened, that its affairs are in splendid shape and that no one need for a moment go into contortions over the affairs of Allen county.

HON. ELI W. BROWN

Will Not Resign the Joint Senatorship from Allen and Whitley Counties.

Hon. Eli W. Brown has not resigned the joint senatorship from Allen and Whitley counties, and his friends say he will not, in view of the unsatisfactory result of yesterday's joint senatorial convention. The Whitley county delegates went into caucus with the avowed and agreed understanding that whoever of the aspirants received a majority of the votes in the caucus, he alone should be presented to the convention.

On the thirteenth ballot Hon. William F. McNagny received seven out of twelve votes of Whitley county and was their choice. In the convention the names of Mr. McNagny, Colonel McDonald and Mr. Tully were announced, violating the caucus agreement. This causes a serious division and the Whitley county people openly expressed it on the street yesterday afternoon. It is unlikely that Mr. Brown will resign the joing senatorship or that his friends will let him, preferring first that he give up the postoffice at Columbia City, to which place he has not yet been confirmed.

STRIKE!

Nine Hundred Men Out of Work.

The Eighteen St. Louis Planing Mills to be Closed Because of this Fact.

The Leaders of Other Great Industrial Societies Make War on Knights of Labor.

A BIG STRIKE.

Nine Hundred Men out of Work at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, May 20.---Machine men in eighteen planing mills struck to-day for an advance and the adoption of the eight hour system. About 500 men are affected directly and 300 or 400 more indirectly. The proprietors say they will shut down indefinitely.

The strike in the southwestern lumber district of Chicago has apparently collapsed. All the yards were working yesterday with all the men whom they can provide work for. All the planing mills have also resumed, and the metal working establishments report increased forces of men at work. The only factories now idle are the furniture shops, and several of these have succeeded in resuming on the ten hour plan.

A dispatch from Cleveland cites a prominent Knight of Labor as saying that the Hon. James G. Blaine, of Maine, is a member of the local assembly of Knights of Labor at Augusta.

A strike is threatened in the Belleville (Ill.) mining district. The men complain that they average but $4 or $5 per week; that they often go to work hungry; that their families lack food, and that their children are kept from church and school owing to the rags by which their bodies are partially covered.

Molders' Strike at Terre Haute.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 20.—All the molders at the Terre Haute car works, about forty in number, went out on a strike against the reinstatement of Arthur Springer to his place in the shop. Springer was once foreman of the molding room, and the men imagined when he came back that he would be put over them again as foreman. He only went to work this morning. The men say Springer was unpopular when foreman before. The other departments of the works are running as usual.

THE K.'S OF LABOR

Meet With Great Opposition from Their Own People.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.— Officers of twenty national trades unions met here with closed doors to take united action, it was stated, to resist the encroachments being made upon open unions by the Knights of Labor. William Weihe, of Pittsburg, president of the Amalgamated society of iron and steel workers, presided. P. J. Maguire, of Cleveland, who represented the National Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, acted as secretary, and Vice-President John S. Kirchner, of the Cigar Makers' International Union, as sergeant-at-arms. Twenty delegates, representing the national orders of the following trades were present: Coal miners, printers, iron moulders, cigar makers, carpenters, brick layers, iron and steel workers, furniture makers, granite cutters, laster, ihoiler makers, bakers, tailors, metal workers, nailers, heaters and rollers, boot and shoestitchers, and the national federation of trades. Letters pledging themselves to stand by the action of the conference were received from the druggists, glass blowers, wool hat finishers, telegraphers, Ohio Valley Trades assembly, silk and fur hat finishers, flint glass workers, piano makers, engineers and machinists, and mule spinners. The thirty-two associations represented by delegates or letters were claimed to have a total membership of 367,736. The representatives of each organization presented its grievance.

Resolutions were adopted that unions should strictly preserve their distinct and individual autonomy; that it is not deemed advisable for any trades unions to be controlled by, or to join the Knights of Labor in a body, and that is the purpose of a certain element of the Knights of Labor to destroy the trades unions. A treaty was drafted for the consideration of the Knights of Labor, which will be submitted to the general executive board by a special committee.

WASHINGTON.

The Business of the National Legislators.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Staten Island bridge bill was laid before the senate. Mr. McPherson resumed his speech against the bill as reported and in support of his amendment providing for tunnel instead of a bridge.

The senate amendment of $800,000 to foreign mail service clause in the postoffice appropriation bill was rejected by a vote of 142 to 86, followed by democratic cheers. The house concurred in this vote of the committee of the whole.

Senator Voorhees says there is no doubt whatever about the confirmation of Collector Hanlon, and there is no truth in the rumor that the finance committee will report adversely on the nomination.

HOUSE.

In the house, Holman, from the committee on appropriations, reported the executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bill. Referred to the committee of the whole.

The house went into committee of the whole on the senate amendments to the postoffice appropriation bill. The amendment setting apart $40,000 of the appropriation for a free delivery service where it is not now established was concurred in. An amendment was rejected which authorized the postmaster general to contract for inland and foreign mail service when it can be combined in one route, and also the amendment increasing by $80,000 the appropriation for the postal car service. The amendment was concurred in increasing from $251,725 to $291,000 for regular and special facilities in trunk lines.

POWDERLY PREFERRED.

He Can Remain Master Workman of the K. of L.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—Frederick Turner, general secretary-treasurer of the Knights of Labor, was asked yesterday what he thought of Martin Irons' candidacy for election as general master workman, as announced in a dispatch from St. Louis, printed in to-day's Press. "I can only say," said he, "what I have said all along; that as long as Powderly wants to be grand master workman of the Knights he can be it. There is no man in the order who can take the position from him if he wants to retain it. It was perfectly right for Mr. Powderly to countermand Irons' order in regard to the St. Louis strike." A number of the most prominent Knights of Labor, among whom were John J. Cummings, secretary of district assembly No. 1, and George Frank, master workman of the cigarmakers' assembly, expressed similar sentiments in favor of Mr. Powderly's continuance in office, and in condemnation of Irons.

Squeezing the Small Brewers.

CHICAGO, May 20.—The leading brewers of Chicago and Milwaukee, who are combined in the Northern Brewers' association, to-day began a reduction in the price of beer, which is said to be the first step of a pre-arranged plan to squeeze out the small firms. During the past year a dozen small brewing concerns have started in this city, and, refusing to join the association, have set their own price on their product. Members of the association will hereafter charge but $6 per barrel instead of $7.20. The cost of manufacture is said to be $3.50, and it is expected the price will soon go below $6.

On Wednesday she called on one of the leading physicians of that city and a high-toned society doctor, who, it is alleged, performed an operation on her from which she died on Saturday. A young man from this place arrived there yesterday and to-day shipped the remains to this city. He claimed then to be her brother. The young lady is a striking brunette, handsomely dressed, with diamond ear-rings and valuable finger rings. Her identity has not yet been learned."

ST. LOUIS, May 20.—In the Maxwell trial, barber who shaved off Maxwell's beard and cut his hair, testified that Maxwell asked if it changed his appearance and seemed delighted at being told he could not be recognized. A pawn broker told of Maxwell's trying to get money on a watch from him a few days before the murder and having a roll of bills of a large denomination a short time afterwards.

HIS TURN.

A Big Damage Suit for Mob Violence at Wabash.

WABASH, Ind., May 20.—Reuben Swank, the alleged wife-beater, of North Manchester, in this county, yesterday filed an action in the Wabash circuit court against the following well-known business and professional men of that place, who, it is alleged, were members of the mob which, in April, pulled him out of bed and gave him a fearful whipping. Tobias Pugh, Guilford Place, Doud Hamilton, Len J. Noftzger, B. F. Clemans, Daniel Salau, James Sexton, Wm. Pearson and Robert Shaeffer. The demand is for $10,000, and Swank declares that he will push the matter to the bitter end. Swank was terribly beaten and compelled to leave town under penalty of death. A rope was put around his neck, and with this he was led over the river and told to move out in a hurry. The beginning of the suit creates a sensation in North Manchester.

John W. McQuiddy made his report as grand instructor and as chairman of the committee of the Colfax monument. The latter showed that contributions had not been as numerous nor as large as had been expected., but they hoped to do better in the future and to raise $5,000 in Indiana, so as to insure the completion of the monument. The subscriptions of the various states and territories foot up $2,088.65; of this amount Illinois contributed $195. Iowa $146, Michigan $85, and Kansas $111. The remainder was mostly from eastern and southern states.

The following were nominated last night: Grand master, A. N. Grant, of Kokomo; deputy grand master; L. T. Michener, of Shelbyville; secretary, B. F. Foster, of Indianapolis; treasurer, T. P. Houghey, of Indianapolis, and nine candidates for grand wardens. The election will occur at the November meeting of the Grand lodge.

Mason Long has become a martyr to the cause of temperance and morality. The other day at Sigourney, Ia., he was rotten egged by a lot of hoodlums who took exceptions to his remarks against drinking and gambling.

A FAIR TRIAL IN TERRE HAUTE.

The nineteenth century is said to be the age of skepticism, and so perhaps it is as regards religion, but its practical spirit inclines it to look favorably on everything that promises immediate benefit and it is always ready to give everything that seems useful a fair trial. The West especially has ever been open and cordial to all new ideas, and this may partly explain why Athlophoros, the sovereign remedy for rheumatism and neuralgia, has secured such a strong footing in Terre Haute. A well-known citizen who has the most implicit faith in it is Mr. R. Forster, the furniture dealer at No. 320 Main street. Mr. Forster, when recently asked at his warerooms as to the benefit he had derived from Athlophoros, answered as follows:

"Yes, I have used Athlophoros with the very best satisfaction. I have had neuralgia for many years, and could not find any medicine that would give me relief until I commenced using Athlophoros, and I can tell you I had used about everything."

"How did you first get confidence enough in Athlophoros to try it?"

"Well, it was just in this way. I was suffering very much at the time from my neuralgia. One Saturday evening Mr. Mallette, a manufacturer of wire mattresses, who is in business in Chicago, and lives at Elgin, Ill., came down to spend Sunday with me. Finding me suffering as I was he said

"'Get some Athlophoros. It is good, my wife used it and was cured of her neuralgia by it.'

"Without waiting for me to say much about it he went out and bought a bottle of the medicine. I took some that night and the next day I was as free from pain as if I had never had neuralgia. I spent several hours in a walk that Sunday with Mr. Mallette, which the day before would have been misery for me. During the summer months I am never troubled with neuralgia, but if I should be again I would certainly use Athlophoros, for I am fully convinced of its merits.

"I have recommended Athlophoros to several persons and have yet to learn of an instance where it did not accomplish its mission. Among others I recommended it to Mrs. Richards, who lives in Casey, Ill. I saw her in the city a few days ago and asked her if she had used it. She said that she had taken two bottles. It was helping her, and she said that she was going to get some more."

Mrs. C. A. Armstrong, of No. 123 South Second street, is another resident of Terre Haute, Ind., whom Athlophoros has cured.

"I used it for neuralgia," she says, "and it cured me. I had been troubled for about three years with what seemed at times neuralgia, and then again rheumatism. I was never free from pain. The very first dose of Athlophoros I took gave me relief, and after using only two bottles my soreness is all gone and I am feeling much stronger. My daughter was also cured of neuralgia by it."

"Yes, I can say Athlophoros did everything for me," is the daughter's statement. "I was so sick with neuralgia that I could not sit up and suffered the greatest pain. Mother sent me a half bottle of Athlophoros, the first few doses of which gave me relief. All I used was the half bottle and I have not had any neuralgia since."

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send, it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed ATHLOPHOROS CO., 112 Wall Street, New York

There Are a Few Druggists

who care more to make a large profit on a worthless article than to wait for the prosperity that ultimately results from honest dealing. These are the men who when asked for a Benson's Capcine Plaster, will recommend some cheap and trashy substitute or imitation, saying it is 'just as good.'" Sometimes they will do up and sell the miserable imitation without remark, allowing the customer to suppose he has Benson's. If the valueless plaster is returned, Cheap John will say he made a mistake;—if not, he has done a good stroke of business. The public are cautioned against John and all his ilk. Buy of respectable druggists only. The genuine Benson's plaster has the "Three Seals" trade mark and the word "Capcine" cut in the centre. 17-4w

A Tot Who Wanted to Pluck the Stars.

Mr. and Mrs. Graves, of Echo, Tenn., were sitting chatting pleasantly in the sitting-room one evening, when their little 4-year-old daughter came in and exclaimed: "Mamma, mamma, come and see." Mrs. Graves got up and went with her little daughter out in the yard. "What is it, my daughter?" "Mamma, what is that up yonder so bright?" she asked. "Where, my little child?" "Up yonder in the sky. Are they little gold dollars, mamma?" asked little Fannie. "Yes, my darling," said the good woman, laughingly, and went in the house, leaving her to watch the little gold dollars. Little Fannie climbed up on the fence and tried to get one, and her father, seeing her, went to her. "What are you doing up there, little pet?" he asked, as he took her down. "I am trying to get me some little gold dollars to make me some earrings." "Couldn't you get them, baby?" "No, papa," she said, sweetly; "please get them for me." Little Fannie was taken into the house and put to bed, but she will never forget the "little gold dollars."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Wonderful Mexican Garden.

Cuernavaca is celebrated as the home of the conqueror Cortez, says a correspondent of the Providence Journal, and the site of his curious palace of hewn stone. But it is just as celebrated for the great Borda Gardens.

The Borda is not what it once was, when the hand of neglect was lifted from its wonderful forest of flowers. This beautiful garden has been sad ever since the death of its imperial lover, the arch-duke of Austria, Maximilian, emperor of Mexico. The vegetation is unkept, and the dishevelled foliage falls over the trees, till they seem almost human in their sorrow and resemble that poor demented woman in the European castle who still fondly fancies that the golden rim of Mexico's crown rests on the head of her husband Maximilian. In this mournful garden the branches of the trees seem twisted in paroxysms of pain and flung in desperate and threatening attitude towards the sky. The great pond is covered with a mantle of green, that crape of waters. The shaded aisles are deserted. The only gardeners who water the flowers are the clouds of heaven; the only workman who trims the trees is sombre autumn. But on entering this spot the sentiment of admiration is at once aroused. The visitor instinctively enters on tiptoe as if he were treading some enchanted ground, as if he feared to wake the birds asleep upon the branches, the dryads hidden in the old ash trees or the nymphs under the never ruffled water of the ponds. Face to face with nature in this lonely trysting place the heart of the tourist is drawn out towards nature, while love for the beautiful is led by the hand of fear through the scented walks of La Borda.

The silence of solitude reats over the thousands of acres. The voice of man is unheard. But the trees, the bending flowers, the rippling streams and the soughing breezes seem to speak. Outside the garden the tropic sunlight of the Tierra Caliente falls like molten lead; inside the air is refreshing, and the aisles arched with giant palms are as cool as the aisles of a great cathedral. The first feeling experienced is such as is felt when one enters a great palace. But here no liveried lackey or armed slave tries to eject us. The dryads do not issue from ash or cedar to dismiss us. This great garden cannot be compared with the uniform and carefully cultivated gardens round the City of Mexico. It is an immense forest of flowers and fruits. Even the dead pond is of unusual proportions. Maximilian of Austria, prince and artist as he was, spent there the happiest hours of his stormy reign in Mexico, but the angel with the flaming sword drove him and his brilliant Carlotta out of that paradise, never to enter again. Never again will that romantic adventurer tread those suspended gardens, like the hanging gardens of Semiramis, poised above the Tierra Caliente that lies below those cliffs. The gardens cover some of the most beautiful mountain slopes in all the state of Morelos, where they were first laid out by Count Borda, a Spanish miner, who became a millionaire by precious metals he extracted from the celebrated Tasco mines in the state of Guerrero. They are desolate and deserted now. But some new Mexican or American millionaire may some day people with marble statues those deep forests, and may throw heaven's sunlight down through those roofs of fragrance. Then will disappear that spell of enchantment. Cortez and his mistress, Malluche, will then no longer haunt La Borda, nor the "foot steps of return" be heard of Maximilian and Carlotta. Mexico's children of to-morrow may play in those now silent shades and under those talismanic trees.

LOVE FOR THE OLD FLAG.

Its Thrilling Effect After the War Upon a Noted Rebel General.

The war of the rebellion is now twenty years away, and with the lapse of time nearly all the asperities culminating in that long and bloody struggle have softened and disappeared. One of the most prominent leaders of the South, who had filled the highest offices of the country before the war, and who has long since passed away, is the subject of this little reminiscence.

Some years subsequent to the close of the war, the writer was in business in a Southern city, where his duties brought him in close contact with many men who had been prominent in cabinet and field under the flag of the Confederacy. It happened one evening that the writer and a half dozen or more of these men were engaged in conversation, and, after a while, from general matters the talk drifted round to the condition of the country. Growing excited as the conversation progressed, one denounced the government at Washington as a perfect despotism, asserting with vehemence that he would sooner, if he could, live under the King of Dahomey. One after another gave expression to his feelings, none going to the same extent, but all in the same vein, and I, a Northern man, was about to make a fitting reply to the tirade of abuse when General —— turned to him of whom I am writing, and resting his hand on his shoulder, said: "What do you say about it, John?"

The person addressed had sat for many moments with bowed head, taking no part in the conversation. Lifting his head and gazing round a moment he replied, in a tone I shall never forget and a feeling I cannot hope to portray: "I have this to say: Let the Republican party do the worst it can; let the Republicans do fifty times worse than they are doing, and then we shall the best government any people in the world ever had. We went through the war together, and we suffered all its ills in common, but when it ended our ways parted. You remained and took up the burdens and duties of peaceful life in your old homes, and, ruined and devastated as they were, you still found comfort in them. I took a different course and endured what you were not called upon to face. When all was over, you all know how I reached Cuba, and then went to London, where I found friends. I took a notion to travel, and for four years I wandered over Europe. Then one morning I was at Alexandria, and rising early, I strolled down toward the quays, and looking out over the bay, there, gentlemen (the tears running down his cheeks as he spoke), I saw floating in the sunshine the handsomest flag that ever floated, the old stars and stripes, and I thought, in an ecstacy I never before felt, there is my flag. I had followed it up the heights of Chapultepec; it had waved over my home; my children had played among its folds; it had been raised in my honor, and in the momentary rush of feelings it was again my flag, and the dearest and most beautiful thing upon the earth. But all was gone as soon as it came, and for the first time I realized in all its terrible force the fact that I had no flag, no country, but was an outcast and a wanderer over the earth. I could endure it no longer. I came back over the sea. I had no part in all this broad domain, no right to set my foot on any part of the soil of the United States, but I said the rest of my life shall be lived in sight of it even if I may never more have right in it. So I came to Clifton, just over the border, where I could see it over the river which I might not cross, and there the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night I watched it and longed for it with a hunger few men may comprehend. At last, but oh, how long in coming to me, came the amnesty act, and I got over the river and took it, begrudging even the minutes that intervened when I could say again, "it is my flag and my country."

He ended, and for minutes not a person present ventured a word, but moistened eyes and labored breath silently attested that more than one present could in heart, at least, find warrant for the longings of John C. Breckenridge, for he it was of whom I have written, whose longings I have attempted to portray, but whose language is beyond my ability to reproduce. —Boston Globe.

In the Dear Old Days.

We differ in creed and politics, but we are a unit all the same on the hesitableness of a fine head of hair. If you mourn the loss of this blessing and ornament, a bottle or two of Parker's Hair Balsam will make you look as you did in the dear old days. It is worth trying. It is the only standard 50c article for the hair.

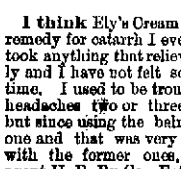

I think Ely's Cream Balm is the best remedy for catarrh I ever saw. I never took anything that relieved me so quickly and I have not felt so well for a long time. I used to be troubled with severe headaches two or three times a week, but since using the balm have only had one and that was very light compared with the former ones.—A. J. Alcorn, agent U. P. Ry Co., Eaton, Co.

I find Ely's Cream Balm good for catarrh of long standing.—M. N. Lasley, 1934 West Chestnut St., Louisville.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The Earth's Temperature.

Between Merseburg and Schladebach, Saxony, there has been bored the deepest auger hole in the world. The intention originally was to search for coal, but being unsuccessful the boring has been used to experiment on the temperature of the interior of the earth. A glass tube, open at the top and filled with quicksilver, was inclosed in a metal tube in such a manner as to prevent the entrance of water and still not to prevent its sensibility to the effects of temperature. When the glass tube was reached and let down a warmer temperature the quicksilver exploded and a portion run over. When the tube was brought up the quicksilver, cooled down, and consequently occupied less space in the tube than before. The glass tube with the remaining quicksilver was then placed in water the temperature of which was high enough to make the quicksilver rise again to the brim of the tube, which showed that the temperature of the water was exactly the same as that of the interior of the earth. The depth of the boring is 4,500 feet, and the temperature at the bottom has been ascertained to be 120 degrees Fahrenheit. This temperature increasing in the same ratio, the boiling point of water would be reached at 10,000 feet; at a depth of 47 miles sufficient heat would be found to melt platina. The radius of the earth being 3,950 miles, the ratio of the solid crust of the earth to the radius would be as 1 to 85. According to this measurement, then, the point at which lead would melt would be reached at a depth of five or six miles, which would indicate that the crust of the earth is not so thick and firm as has been supposed. We must accept the theory, however, that in penetrating to the interior of the earth the increase of heat is by no means found to be regular.

DID WE LIVE BEFORE?

HOW THE THEORY OF PRE-EXISTENCE HAS TAKEN ROOT.

A Talk With a Believer—Every Man What He Has Made Himself—Genius an Inheritance From Other Lives. How to Read Past Incarnations.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, May 17.—Re-embodiment of souls is a subject much talked of in New York by those who are fond of exploring new fields of thought. Not only is it talked of, but believed in, by a large number of persons whose brains command respect in the practical pursuits of life. It is a little startling to hear an envied business man or an "able editor" declare his belief in a pre-existence, unless one is familiarized with the reincarnation doctrine. You can't think of him as anybody but himself; but he can, because he has accustomed his mind to it.

Indeed, among believers in this interesting theory, it is quite the fashionable recreation to give your friends the benefit of what you think you were in the life immediately preceding this one, and also to hazard a few guesses as to what they were. As you can readily see, this is a fresh and fascinating field for conversation. It has extraordinary possibilities and no limitations. But here is a queer thing in regard to it: You can tell a friend that you believe he was no end of a scoundrel in his past embodiments, and he never gets angry with you—in all probability he agrees with you, and admits that the penalties imposed upon him in this life are just. Yet if you hinted that he had been wicked and worthless in this life, however irresponsible he may have been for it, and that whatever trouble he is now staggering under is the direct result of his wrongdoing, he would most likely knock you down, if you should belong to the sex that gets knocked down. His previous existences, however, you can slander and detract with impunity. They are a long way in his rear, and neither reflect glory nor shame, for the reason that reputation's data for this existence begins with this existence.

Yet the re-embodiment theory distinctly states that we are what we have made ourselves. We suffer from ourselves. The objective man born into the physical world is the creation of the person he last animated. Our joys, sorrows and sins are of our own making. Our life is a fabric woven by ourselves. The eastern word for this is "karma." It is a saddy put upon word just now, rottonated so often that it is likely to grow a little wearisome. We have no western equivalent for this Hindu term, which is a volume compressed into a single word. "And what an idea it conveys of sowing and reaping, and justice!"

I was present where two or three were gathered together discussing reincarnation, recently. The editor of a humorous journal joined us. Somebody repeated the conversation to him up to the point we had carried it. "Oh, yes, I believe that I lived before," he said, seriously, "and that I shall live again, and again and again."

Then, in a lighter vein: "I must have lived to very poor purpose, too, when I created such a karma for myself as I am now experiencing. Think of it, doomed to edit the stuff they call humor. What could I have done to deserve it?"

One man, a writer whose name carries weight all over the American newspaper world, told me in confidence that he had reason to believe he had been re-embodied nineteen times on this planet alone, and that in one of his embodiments he had been a great French military man.

I know a woman whose friends believe her to have been an anchorite in some previous existence. Traces of grim ascetieism are still noticeable in her. If she were told to choose between a bed of rose leaves and a board, she would chose the board. She denies herself bodily ease from a curious feeling that she ought to which her reason doesn't indorse. She makes every bit of toil as hard as possible, although she talks much about simplifying life and labor.

Another woman thinks she was a man in an existence immediately preceding this, because she doesn't care a cent for men; finds it impossible to love them, and is bored by the society of the handsomest and best of them in an hour or less time.

And still another admits having been a gossip and tale-bearer in another life. During her childhood, she would risk breaking her neck any time to be the first to tell something or somebody. However interesting it is to surmise what our previous lives were, it is still more interesting to shape out our future lives. According to the Buddhistic theory we can be what we wish to be. We are creating our future lives now. In truth, that is a law which fulfills itself even in this world, as Stonewall Jackson, who believed in it, demonstrated. Emerson also believed that every man could possess what he wished to possess if he would only pay the price.

Not every one who believes in re-embodiment of spirit is a Buddhist. People of all religions and of no religion take to it, at least just now when it seems to be the vogue. It is gratifying to the ego; it makes every man his own ancestor, and ranks him in the matter of age and experience equal with the oldest and wisest. One of the chief allurements of this theory is that it makes no man older than the youngest infant, except in this round of life. It consoles the old, for it promises them youth over again. I talked with one of its strongest adherents the other day—a man whose opinion on all subjects pertaining to the mundane welfare of mankind is honored. I asked him what was the strongest point he could make in favor of the re-embodiment theory.

"The justice of it," he answered. "It is the only plan which promises absolute justice to every human being, and makes each responsible for himself. I believe that we are the creatures of centuries, of cycles, of millions and millions of ages. We have always a future before us greater than the past. Our blunders can be retrieved, our sins atoned for, our longings realized. We shall reap as we have sown, and, mark you, this belief makes us exceedingly particular in the sowing. If I were to play the tyrant and oppressor here I truly believe that in my next embodiment I should pay the penalty by being a miserable serf, and I should deserve it, too."

"How about your intermediate time—the period between your death here and your re-birth?"

"Oh, we devote that time to getting rested and refreshed for the next fight. Between each physical existence the individual unit passes through a period of existence in the corresponding spiritual world. The Buddhists call that, or the highest phase of it, Devachan, and say that the soul rests there from 1,500 to 2,000 years. For my part I believe that it dies out of its spiritual existence as we do out of this life, and in the process is really born into another worldly existence. The life of a man, like a world system, is a terminable period. And then, did you ever think of the unfairness of dividing our life into thirty or seventy years here, and an eternity on the other side of the grave? It isn't a fair shake. The only eternity that seems just and possible to me is an eternity of lives, which will give every soul action, development, as well as disburse the rewards and penalties. We are experiencing a part of that eternity now, and we always have been."

"But if your theory is correct children are not really related to their parents?"

"Only by the laws of attraction. Spirits will seek embodiment through agencies like themselves; but if these are not accessible I believe the impulse to live is so overpowering that they will seize any opportunity of entering life that presents itself, and that accounts for the incongruities we often see in families and surroundings."

"But if you lived before you ought to have some recollection of it."

"Not necessarily, although we are not sure but we do. Whence come the thoughts, fancies and vague, far-off memories that all are familiar with? Who knows how much of his mental coloring he owes to this life and how much to previous lives? Who has not, in agony, sometimes echoed the poet's soliloquy: 'Methinks I lived in some old world, and this is hell.' Who remembers the first five years of his life? All our infancy is a blank. Who remembers all he said, saw or heard on any one day of last week? Yet we were as much ourselves as infants as we are now in maturity. I have lived nearly forty-five years, yet all that I can remember perfectly would scarcely cover thirty complete days of my existence, yet I was as much myself in the large parts of my life which I cannot remember, as in the present moment."

"How came you to acquire this belief?"

"I did not acquire it. It was an inheritance. I brought that much of my previous lives with me in memory. I cannot recall a time when I did not believe in it. As a child I used to shut my eyes and try very hard to remember something that seemed near to me, but could not become clear. But I believe in pre-existence as a matter of philosophy. It explains why man is here, without libeling nature or God; it fixes the responsibility on man himself, without outraging justice, and it presents the strongest incentive for good actions."

"You think, then, that man is a free agent."

"From the standpoint of pre-existence every human being is self-made. One can see that men are free to do as they will after they are created, hence it would seem that the ordinary theory of free will is correct. Then he reflects that men have nothing to do with their own creation; that some are created good and some bad, some wise and some foolish, some beautiful and some ugly, and that their good or bad qualities are inheritances. Then he is forced to believe that man should be neither credited nor condemned for qualities which he is not responsible for, but which were inherited from ancestors or were the gift or curse of the Creator. This process of reasoning will not only destroy all basis for belief in free will, but tends to weaken the commendation of good qualities or the condemnation of bad ones, since an individual is responsible for neither, if they were given him in his creation. Let us take Emerson, if you please, as the type of our best man of late years—morally, intellectually, spiritually; and take Bender, the Kansas murderer, as the type of all that is brutal, ferocious and depraved. Now, if those two men inherited their characters and qualities—if one was created good and the other bad—I do not see why the one should be loved and praised, and the other condemned. It would seem that Emerson was simply a very lucky man in the act of being born; that he drew an extraordinary prize in the lottery of creation, while Bender was unlucky in a remarkable degree, and is deserving of all sympathy. But I deny the tremendous libel on Deity or on Nature, that some men are created good and some bad, without their own knowledge or consent. The theory of preëxistence explains the whole case. Emerson was born into that state of mental, moral and spiritual elevation into which he had developed himself through previous lives. He was, in a sense, his own creator. Hence all the honor given him is justly due him. Our natural feelings on this, as on many other subjects, are right. Bender was what he had made himself, hence the loathing for his character is just."

"And genius, is it, too, self-made?"

"Self-developed, surely. Indeed, the struggles of genius in this world are to me a strong proof of preëxistence. The soul that has partially developed its genius in a previous life brings its longings and its powers here, and through obstacles and defeat finds expression. No one life could perfect a genius of any kind, and a universal genius, a man or woman who can do anything, is the result of a separate development of each talent, the perfecting of many industrious, aspiring lives."

"Do you find anything in the scriptures corroborating your belief?"

"Yes, I think Jesus understood it as he did many other hidden things, and alluded to his incarnation and preëxistence in these words: 'I came from the father, and am come into the world; I leave the world and go unto the father.' Again when he says, 'I can lay down my life and I can take it again.' And it seems that the people he lived among were believers in the re-embodiment of certain ones, at least. They were always looking for the return of the prophets in some new form. They said to Jesus, 'Who art thou? Art thou Elias? Art thou that great prophet?'"

"What are the clews by which we can guess what and who we were in the past?"

"We are our own clews—index, preface and all the chapters are within ourselves. I believe that when men clearly understand this, and think about it, each one's past existence will be an open book. Even now we have but little difficulty in knowing what a man is made of. There is a reason for everything, and when we learn to read the book of human nature aright, every virtue, vice, taste and prejudice will reveal its history, even as the history of a nation can be traced through its language."

"You are a radical and original evolutionist."

"Yes, I believe in an evolution for the spirit of man which is a spiral progress through worlds. This earth is but one link in a mighty chain of worlds. I for one believe that the whole starry heavens is the heritage of the human family."

"Do you think rebirth a voluntary or compulsory matter?"

"Both. I believe that it is the law, just as death here is a great part of the law of nature. We must be born again and we want to be. The impulse to live pervades all matter, seen and unseen. Life in the flesh means development. It is the soul's battle ground. Here we win or lose. The form of man, which we have every reason to suppose is the same after he becomes disembodied as now, was certainly designed for a life of material activity. In the flesh again and again we must live and conquer, or live and fail to try it over and over until we do conquer."

And yet this man who goes about with such tremendous theories in his mind is a successful business man, and fills his place in the world as conscientiously as any worm of the dust who never dreamed that he was to inherit so vast a kingdom as the universe.

GERTRUDE GARRISON.

A Time to be Thankful.

It was once suggested to Mr. Talmage that he get up a lecture on "Cranks," and relate his experience with cranky people. He laughed, and said that while his experience was wide and varied on the subject of "Cranks," yet there was one story that always came to his mind when the conversation turned to these peculiar people. He was once very busy writing in his room at a hotel, when a man stepped up to him and said:

"You are Mr. Talmage?"

"I am, sir."

"Well, sir, I am an evolutionist, and I want to discuss that question with you. I am also an annihilationist. I believe that when I die that will be the end of me."

"Thank God for that!" devoutly ejaculated Mr. Talmage, as he walked off and left the man perfectly dazed.

It will do you positive good. Made by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists. 100 doses $1

The Chicago people now say that Sam Jones ought to have tackled the Anarchists when he was in that city.

They are Not Sorry.

There is one thing nobody ever regrets—that is, the day they first adopted Parker's Tonic as their regular family medicine. Its range is so wide, and its good effects so sure, that nothing else, except good nursing, are needed in a great majority of cases. Buy it, try it, and afterwards it will not require any praise from us.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE Cod Liver Oil, With Hypophosphites,

Is more reliable as an agent in the cure of consumption, chronic coughs and emaciation, than any remedy known to medical science. It is so prepared that the potency of those two most valuable specifics is in largely increased. It is also very palatable.

In the whole of North Carolina it seems there is not a single savings bank. The people find the time-honored old stocking just as safe.

Don't hawk, hawk, blow, spit and disgust everybody with your offensive breath, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh remedy and end it.

It costs a little more than twenty cents a mile to run a locomotive, on an average. A ton of coal will run them twenty-four miles, a pint of oil will run eleven miles, and a pound of waste will run 123 miles.

Is Your Liver out of Order.

Then is your whole system deranged—the blood is impure, the breath offensive, you have a headache, feel languid, dispirited and nervous, have no appetite, your sleep is troubled and unrefreshing. To prevent a more serious condition, take at once a half tablespoonful of Simmons Liver Regulator, three times a day—it will soon restore the healthy action of the liver, bowels and kidneys.

"I recommend Simmons Liver Regulator to all my friends, as I have personally known it to cure all liver disorders and sick headache. A. MERRITT, Beverly, N. J."

Judge Olds has rendered his decision in the Omans case. Mrs Oman first sued her husband for a divorce and $3,000 alimony; then Oman, himself, filed a cross-complaint and also asked for a divorce. To Mrs. Oman he gave $800 alimony, to be paid as follows: $150 in thirty days; $250 in one year, and $400 in two years. Oman is to pay all costs of the trial in addition to the above. E. M. FIGURES TALK.

Allen County in Splendid Shape as All Can Read and Understand.

County Treasurer Dalman proceeded to Indianapolis to-day with a check for $47,862.48, which he will pay to the state treasurer, receiving in return Allen county's portion of the school fund. Mr. Dalman has the books in shape and these footings show the moneys collected for the various funds put on the tax duplicate by-law:

County fund collected	.....	$104,592 38
Township fund	"	6,000 24
Local tuition	"	4,133 24
Special school	"	29 015 07
Road fund	"	18,572 80
Special road fund	"	5,398 95
Dog	"	2,155 83
Gravel road	"	2,016 12

These figures are official and show that $104,592.38 cash is in the county treasury for expenditure on county purposes. Put this cash fund against the $200,000 bonded indebtedness of the county and it reduces the debt to something like $95,500. This shows that this county is not burdened, that its affairs are in splendid shape and that no one need for a moment go into contortions over the affairs of Allen county.

HON. ELI W. BROWN

Will Not Resign the Joint Senatorship from Allen and Whitley Counties.

Hon. Eli W. Brown has not resigned the joint senatorship from Allen and Whitley counties, and his friends say he will not, in view of the unsatisfactory result of yesterday's joint senatorial convention. The Whitley county delegates went into caucus with the avowed and agreed understanding that whoever of the aspirants received a majority of the votes in the caucus, he alone should be presented to the convention.

On the thirteenth ballot Hon. William F. McNagny received seven out of twelve votes of Whitley county and was their choice. In the convention the names of Mr. McNagny, Colonel McDonald and Mr. Tully were announced, violating the caucus agreement. This causes a serious division and the Whitley county people openly expressed it on the street yesterday afternoon. It is unlikely that Mr. Brown will resign the joint senatorship or that his friends will let him, preferring first that he give up the postoffice at Columbia City, to which place he has not yet been confirmed.
